The diagram illustrates a two-page spread layout. It features a central gutter where the pages meet. The left page is outlined with a blue border, and the right page is outlined with a green border. A red border represents the overall dimensions of the spread, including the gutter. On the left side, three horizontal arrows point to the left, indicating the width of different sections: the outermost red line for the gross format, the inner blue line for the net format, and the space between the blue line and the red line for the safety margin.
